The Strawberry Culture.

There appears to be a general disagreement in relation to the culture of strawberries especially as to soil and manure.

A gentleman, an experienced fruit-grower, who called upon us a few days since, said he had come to the conclusion that we made our strawberry-beds too rich.

He, however, agreed with us in the opinion that moist, cool situations, even where there was a little shade a portion of the day, was to be preferred; also that, as a rule, hill-planting should not be adopted, though with a few varieties it might be the best.

In preparing new beds for planting out, we think it can be advised with the best effect, to dig the ground deeply and pulverize thoroughly, putting in the manure that is intended to apply while the bed lasts; and the plant should be set as deep in the soil as possible.

It will be found, we think, in a great majority of cases of failure in cultivating the strawberry, that the frost has had much to do with it; and that on examination the largest portion of the roots are above ground, and affords no support to the plants, which, as a consequence, are stunted in growth, as is also the fruit in size.

Some of our very best strawberry growers have completely failed this year, though every attention, according to their ideas, was given to the crop, especially that of heavily covering with manure in the fall.

If any top-dressing is applied, it should be in the spring, and then there is nothing better than a light coating of ground bones.

From the Maryland Farmer. Walking Horses.

The best gait a horse ever had for every day use is a good walk. It is a gait that not one in ten possesses.

At the Springfield (Mass.) Horse Show of 1860 the writer was one of a committee to award prizes to the best two walking horses. Out of seventeen entered, the committee found but one which was considered a first rate walker.

POULTRY MANURE.—The productive power of the droppings of the henery are very great as compared with ordinary barnyard manure, yet many farmers, with a score or two of fowls, take little or no pains to preserve and apply it to the purposes of vegetable production.

VEAN.—Mr. John Stoker, near Orkland Mills, Nicholas county, has a three-year old virgin heifer, that is giving two gallons of milk per day.

Dillon's Universal Cotton Tie

AND IRON HOOP FOR Baling COTTON.

Iron Hoops for Baling Cotton being largely in use in the South, and being sold much cheaper than Rope, the propriety of using them in place of Rope, is brought to the attention of the Planters. These Ties are great Preservers of Cotton, when baled, from Fire. Every Tie is perfect, and ready for immediate use.

I will keep constantly on hand a lot of the Universal Tie and Iron Hoop, which I will sell at Charleston prices—12 cents, expenses added.

A sample of the above Tie can be seen at this Office, where it may be compared to the Arrow Tie. Persons then can judge for themselves, which they prefer.
